The undersigned has learned from a police resource officer stationed at the Hanover Park High School in East Hanover, New Jersey, that the offender was employed on school premises setting up audio recording equipment at a school function. Specifically, on May 21, 2009, the offender attended a musical production given by the students and recorded the concert for eventual re-sale to parents and students. Additionally, the offender was employed through Madison Township Municipal Borough, where he was hired to set up audio equipment for the township's Memorial Day Parade. When confronted on June 2, 2009, the offender initially denied working in this capacity; however, when presented with specific information, he admitted to the above. The offender is employed full-time as an electrician and he operates his company, Custom Sounds, in his spare time to earn supplemental income. As such, the offender has been directed to no longer accept employment offers for his company's services where children are normally present. The offender understands this to include public parades, school functions, children's parties, or any occasion where children are normally present in large numbers or are the focus or purpose of the event.
